

5 Reasons Why Human Experience Management Is the Future of HR

1 Employees expect more

Employees want a workplace experience that mirrors their consumer experience. They want to work for companies that invest in what they need to be efficient and productive.

With human experience management (HXM), you can meet these needs by giving people digital tools that are easy to use, convenient and intuitive. With the right technology, strategies and practices, you can keep all your employees happy.

93% of employees say they are more likely to stay on-staff with an empathetic employer

2 Increased stress requires empathy and action

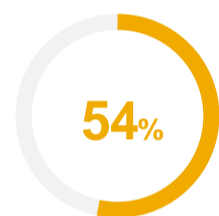

Elevated stress affects everything from employee health and well-being to productivity, collaboration, culture, and retention.

HXM helps you display empathy with methods to understand the unique perspective and experience of every candidate, employee, new hire, or manager. Listening more effectively and addressing their individual needs is the right thing to do and the right business decision.

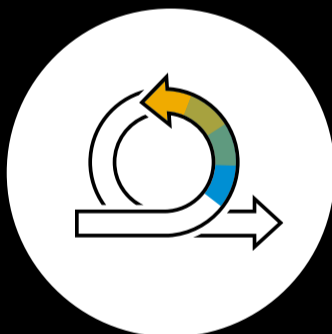

3 Growing competition for in-demand skills

The shelf-life for skills is rapidly getting shorter as technology evolves. Your success depends on finding talent with the right skills and creating a culture of continuous learning and upskilling.

HXM enables you to deliver experiences that suit people's career plans, make them more efficient, and motivate them to contribute their fullest. This benefits every individual and impacts the success of the business.

54% of all employees will require significant reskilling and upskilling

4 Agility is more critical than ever

HXM enables HR and the business to adopt an agile mindset with tools that enable you to realign resources as needed, upskill your teams, and tackle the needs of today while preparing for the realities and opportunities of the future.

5 Building a company culture takes purpose

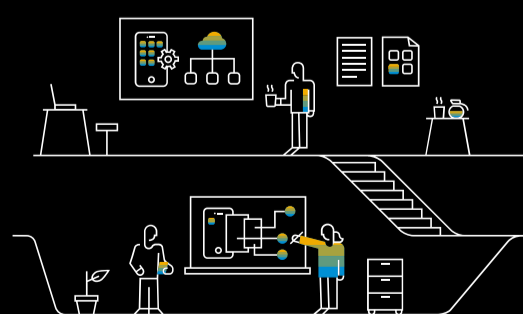

Healthy work cultures are products of design. They require constant work – every day, with every employee, every interaction, every decision.

HXM helps you create an environment in which employees want to work and succeed. HXM helps you deliver the right guidance, access to development opportunities, and the ability to be heard. This builds a culture that enables employees to reach their full potential.

The time is now.

Make the move toward HXM and enable your people to deliver the results your business needs to survive and thrive.

View the full article here or learn more about how to Experience Wins with HXM